Glen Fohdry 12 YO Speyside $59.99 +tax
Japanese Mizunara Oak Cask Finish. 47.1% ABV

Glen Fohdry is a Total Wine house brand therefore almost all online info comes through Total Wine. Distillery is shown as Speyside. It's unfiltered, uncolored, cask strength, finished in rare Japanese Mizunara oak, notoriously difficult for coopers to construct, but famously flavorful to whisky. Aromatics of eucalyptus, cinnamon stick, and cedar wood incense. Marmalade, citrus, and sea salt flavors.

Highland Park Cask Strength No. 2
63.9% ABV. NAS. $88.99 +tax

Highland Park Cask Strength was a blend of whiskies that are matured in predominantly Sherry seasoned American oak barrels. This year, the Master Whisky Maker Gordon Motion decided to spice up the game a little bit and used a majority of Sherry seasoned European and American barrels as well as a small number of ex-bourbon barrels. The whisky also dialed in at a wild 63.9% abv (127.8 proof) this time Highland Park made a bold move by showcasing the qualities of the European Sherry oak they use. The palate is radiant with all the flavors and easy to drink considering such a high proof. Highland Park Cask Strength Release No 2 is definitely playing around a huge spectrum of flavors and I am glad I have another bottle of this coming on my way.

Nose: Raisins, damp leaves, grapefruit twist, brown sugar, antique room. Very heated.

Palate: Caramel, ginger, cinnamon, peppery undertones, yuca root. Unexpectedly easy to drink.

Finish: Very spicy with sweet smoke, ginger, lingering, black pepper.
