Grangestone Bourbon Cask Finish Highland Distillery. NAS. 40% ABV

Not much info available on this one. Highlands, Scotland- Matured in traditional American oak casks until it achieves the perfect balance of green, leafy notes with sweet delicate oak. It is then transferred into first-fill bourbon casks to further develop sweet vanilla notes. Won Silver Medal at the 2016 Intl. Spirits Challenge. One reviewer guessed that it might be the Kininvie Distillery, which is one of the whiskies used in Monkey Shoulder. The other two are Glenfiddich and Balvenie.

- Nose: Vanilla, floral, hint of raisin and toffee
- Taste: Smooth, again the floral and a little spice, not much sweetness.
- Finish: Goes pretty quickly, not memorable.

Lagavulin Distiller's Edition - Islay - 43% ABV

Double Matured in Pedro Ximenez Casks

Based on the classic Lagavulin 16, this limited-edition expression from Diageo's revered Distillers Edition Collection takes Lagavulin's iconic taste profile in an unexpectedly delicious direction with the addition of a second maturation in sherry-seasoned casks.

Nose: The sherry seems to amplify the smoke. Not that it's the most smoky whisky around, but it gives it a more sooty character. Lacquered meat on the barbecue, hints of toffee and a herbal syrup. Dark bramble. Later it becomes more tart and it seems to thin out. A more vinous aroma comes out, as well as some iodine and olive brine.

Mouth: fairly accessible and light, still a little vinous, but it does show a nice smokiness too. Lapsang tea, earthy liquorice, hints of dark chocolate. Then some grassy notes appear (slightly less impressive) with leather and roasted coffee. Also dried seaweed and a lightly acrid, medicinal and peppery note.

Finish: Medium long, with more of the medicinal ashes and sweet malty notes. Hints of baked apples and autumn leaves, with a fine bitter edge.

Lagavulin Distiller's Edition - Islay - 43% ABV Double Matured in Pedro Ximenez Casks

Based on the classic Lagavulin 16, this limited-edition expression from Diageo's revered Distillers Edition Collection takes Lagavulin's iconic taste profile in an unexpectedly delicious direction with the addition of a second maturation in sherry-seasoned casks.

Nose: The sherry seems to amplify the smoke. Not that it's the most smoky whisky around, but it gives it a more sooty character. Lacquered meat on the barbecue, hints of toffee and a herbal syrup. Dark bramble. Later it becomes more tart and it seems to thin out. A more vinous aroma comes out, as well as some iodine and olive brine.

Mouth: fairly accessible and light, still a little vinous, but it does show a nice smokiness too. Lapsang tea, earthy liquorice, hints of dark chocolate. Then some grassy notes appear (slightly less impressive) with leather and roasted coffee. Also dried seaweed and a lightly acrid, medicinal and peppery note.

Finish: Medium long, with more of the medicinal ashes and sweet malty notes. Hints of baked apples and autumn leaves, with a fine bitter edge.

Grangestone Bourbon Cask Finish Highland Distillery. NAS. 40% ABV

Not much info available on this one. Highlands, Scotland- Matured in traditional American oak casks until it achieves the perfect balance of green, leafy notes with sweet delicate oak. It is then transferred into first-fill bourbon casks to further develop sweet vanilla notes. Won Silver Medal at the 2016 Intl. Spirits Challenge. One reviewer guessed that it might be the Kininvie Distillery, which is one of the whiskies used in Monkey Shoulder. The other two are Glenfiddich and Balvenie.

- Nose: Vanilla, floral, hint of raisin and toffee
- Taste: Smooth, again the floral and a little spice, not much sweetness.
- Finish: Goes pretty quickly, not memorable.
